MIDLANDS CITY'S SPIRIT UNBROKEN BY AIR BOMBINGS

Germany Claims Greatly Damaged Town is That of Birmingham

CASUALTIES ARE HIGH

City Pulls Self From Wreckage; Starts Task of Supplying Sinews of War

(By International News Service)
AN ENGLISH MIDLANDS CITY, Nov. 20.—This world famous city, birthplace of statesmen and hub of industry, pulled itself out of air raid wreckage today and went back to the task of supplying the British army and air force with the sinews of war.

(Editor's note: According to Germany, the city is Birmingham.)
There is no denying the heavy damage done when German raiders came over during the night. Casualties are high. But so is the city's indomitable spirit.

Residents of this municipality read newspaper reports informing them that last night's attack represented an attempt by the Germans to " Coventry-ize" the city.

But the ultimate in destruction which the German air force planned has not been achieved. The damage is by no means as heavy as that visited upon Coventry last week. The raid, however, gave air raid precaution workers, fire fighters and home guards a man's day task today. For hours on end they dug through the wreckage of private homes, and other buildings to rescue the injured. Thus far, there had been no official estimate of casualties.

Past Noble Grands' Club Receives A New Member

One new member was welcomed by the Past Noble Grands' Club of Lily Rebekah Lodge, last evening, when a meeting took place at the residence of Mrs. Harry Hinman, New Buckley street. The new affiliate is Mrs. McCloy Mothersbaugh.

Pinochle was enjoyed following the meeting, with prizes awarded to Mrs. William DeVoe, Mrs. DeRoy Ott, Mrs. Howard Fennimore, and Mrs. Wilmer Dyer. Others present were Mrs. Robert Sutton, Jr., Mrs. John Wicher, and Mrs. Emily Heaton. A chicken dinner was served.

GIFT SHOWER

A miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Mrs. G. Ringgold, Market street, Monday afternoon, by Mrs. G. Fisher, and Mrs. E. M. Ringgold.

A repeat was served to: Mrs. E. Payne, Mrs. E. Mount, Mrs. Edward Super, Mrs. E. D. Fells, Mrs. L. White, Mrs. J. White, Bristol; Mrs. Fred Biddle, Mrs. Haywood Jones, Mrs. A. Biddle, Bridgewater; Mrs. M. Byrd, Mrs. M. Faulkner, Philadelphia.

TO FURNISH ROOM

From proceeds received from the card party in I. O. O. F. hall tonight, members of Lily Rebekah Lodge will buy furniture for a room for an elderly woman at the Rebekah Home for the Aged, Philadelphia. The ways and means committee is the sponsoring group, with games starting at 8.30. Three teams are combining for this affair tonight.

Election Activities Told To Women by J. L. Kilcoyne

Election activities in general occupied the attention of the Lower Bucks County Council of Republican Women, last evening, when the members were addressed by John Leslie Kilcoyne, Esq. Many interesting points were brought out by the speaker, who gave an informative address.

Mrs. Leo Lynn, Edgely, was the presiding officer, she telling of sessions of the State Convention of Republican Women held in Harrisburg.

Mrs. Walter Cooper and Mrs. Horace N. Davis gave the secretary's and treasurer's reports, respectively.

The Christmas party for the organization was arranged for December 10th, this to be held in the Travel Club home.

DIRECTOR OF NURSES PRAISES AUXILIARY

Morrisville Hospital Unit Complimented On Work Done For Trenton Hospital

ENJOY A FINE DINNER

MORRISVILLE, Nov. 20.—Tribute was paid to the work done by the Morrisville Ladies' Auxiliary to the McKinley Hospital, by Miss Ruth Barker, director of nurses at the Trenton institution.

The 43rd annual banquet of the Auxiliary was held in the Methodist Church here. Mrs. William Gentry, heading the Young People's Group of the church, served the supper.

Miss Barker spoke of the many improvements made to the institution and its great need for continued help by such organizations as the local auxiliary.

The auxiliary took as its project this past year the renovating of the Morrisville Room at the hospital. It is now a semi-private room, beautifully decorated with permanent wall covering with colors in keeping with the hospital scheme on the second floor of the main building. Orders were given at the banquet for two easy chairs as a part of the final furnishings. The auxiliary also maintains another room in the new wing of the hospital known as the Harriet Naylor Memorial.

Reports of the year's activities were given by the various committees and plans for the future discussed. The next meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. William Kelly, of 30 East Franklin street, on December 10, with the Misses Edith and Rose Watson assisting. This is an important session, because it is annual Christmas donation night, when members are asked to bring donations of jelly, fruits and canned goods to be distributed among ward patients during the holidays. Morrisville residents who are interested in this work may bring their donations to the home of Mrs. Kelly on December 10th.

Officers are: President, Mrs. Charles E. Stokes; vice-president, Mrs. William Sunderland; second vice-president, Mrs. Nellie Marie Hibbs; treasurer, Mrs. William J. Kelly; secretary, Mrs. Robert Schanck; sunshine cards, Mrs. Henry Griffith; flowers, Mrs. Thomas Pursell; location, Mrs. William Sunderland; sickness and distress, Miss R. P. Watson and Mrs. Arthur Beadle; publicity, Miss Edith F. Watson; inspiration, Mrs. Robert Schanck; Mrs. Harry Burns, Mrs. George Ryan, Mrs. Cleveland Reed and Mrs. Charles Young.

Home Art Club Tenders

Party To One of Number

Members of the Home Art Club tendered Mrs. John Scordia, Beaver street, a party in honor of her birthday, Saturday. A fine repeat was served, and the table was decorated with cut flowers. The hostess received many gifts.

Those present: Miss Jennie Paoletta, Mrs. Nicholas Paoletta, Mrs. Daniel Greco, Mrs. Joseph Giampietro, Mrs. Nicholas DeBlassio, Mrs. Rocco Manzo, and Mrs. Edward Paoletta, Tullytown.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

A formal organization of Doylestown Adult School will be perfected at the close of the term when officers are chosen.

Judge Calvin S. Boyer, president, two other members of the present committee, and 12 men and women, one representative from each class, will name the officers.

When a song contest was held at Beaver College, Jenkintown, last evening, a Bucks County miss was the piano accompanist. She is Miss Mary Alice Lippincott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Y. Lippincott, Doylestown, who accompanied her senior classmates.

Each class writes original words and music for a class song, pep song, and alma mater, and these are presented to the entire school. A silver cup is awarded the class giving the best performance.

During a meeting of the ladies' auxiliary of the Warrington Township Fire Company it was decided to purchase two auxiliary tanks for the firemen.

The president was asked to appoint a member of the local auxiliary to serve on the program committee of the ladies' auxiliary of the Bucks County Firemen's Association and to attend a meeting to be held in Langhorne Monday, November 18th. Mrs. Clara McKinstry suggested that the president serve on that committee.

There were 1914 garm nets gathered by members of Newtown Branch of the Needlework Guild of America when the annual exhibition was held in Fellowship Hall, Newtown Presbyterian Church, last week.

Throughout the afternoon the public viewed the exhibit, and in the evening a meeting was held. Cash contributions for the year amounted to $40.25. Mrs. Walter H. Mohr presided.

A program of vocal and instrumental music was presented at the guest night meeting of New Hope Junior Women's Club in the Methodist Church, New Hope, Thursday.

The program, enjoyed by approximately 40 persons, including members of the senior women's club, was presented under the direction of the music committee, of which Miss Mabel Frantz is the chairman. Other members of the committee are Mrs. John G. Fetterolf and Mrs. Hillborn Dean.

Miss Ruth Buckman, the president, conducted a short business session, and at that time announcement was made that the card party held in the headquarters of Tyro Hall Grange, Buckingham, recently had netted the club $22.47.

A report of the junior get-together held in the Temperance House, Newtown, several weeks ago, was given by Miss Anna Wasser, and Mrs. Frank L. Magill, the senior advisor, gave an account of the Fall meeting of the Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs, held in Perkasie the latter part of last month.

BENSALEM SENIORS TO PRESENT COMEDY

Play Entitled "June Mad" Will Be Given in High School Auditorium Dec. 5 and 6

THE CAST IS ANNOUNCED

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Nov. 20.—Seniors of the Bensalem Township high school will present a play entitled "June Mad" in the high school auditorium on the evenings of December 5th and 6th. The play has been called a "laugh-a-minute" comedy and concerns itself with the happenings of a typical mid-Western family—the Woods and their children's friends, among whom is a college student who makes himself quite at home when he comes to visit with the Woods.

The cast: Penny Wood, Virginia Boyd; Chuck Harris; Henry Hunt; Mervyn Roberts; Mayhew Call; Milly Lou, Eleanor Getz; Roger Van Vleck, Dick Colbert; Mrs. Wood, Marie Willard; Dr. Wood, Ellwood Rittenhouse; Elmer Tuttle, Herman Becker; Effie, Marian Dill; Shirley Wentworth, Frances Mattocks; Ralph Wentworth, Neil Juliff; Julie Harris, Dorothy Doyle; Mr. Harris, William Stinger.

At present architects are working on plans for the new store. The Wallace & Flum property will be torn down after the first of the year and the new store will be completed by March 15, 1941.

The entire front of both properties will be completely renovated, with the addition conforming to the general lines of the present McCrory building. The addition will be one story in height. The adjoining wall between the two properties will be removed.

At present the floor space of the McCrory store occupies about 4000 square feet. When the alterations are completed the store will occupy almost double that space, with 7200 square feet of floor space.

Mr. Queen declared that the improved store will be the most complete and modern store of its type in Bucks County. An entire new lighting system of the latest design will be installed, and several new departments will be added. Among the new departments will be a luncheonette counter.

The new store, which it is believed will compare favorably with other stores in both Trenton and Phila., will be prepared to take care of the needs of its customers in 100 per cent fashion. It will make a welcome addition to the modernization program of Mill street business establishments.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Expanded Aid The Need

Washington, Nov. 19. WHEN the new Congress meets in January there will be a movement to expand our aid to Great Britain sufficiently powerful, it is hoped, to break down the barriers which now stand in the way of the wholehearted help for which the crisis calls.

The movement is now gathering impetus. Within the next few weeks it will be fully organized. By the time Congress convenes it is expected to be irresistible. There are two primary objectives. The first is repeal of the neutrality law, which every day's experience makes look sicker. So long as it is on the books it is, as the Louisville Courier Journal points out, "an admission that we do not mean business in opposing Hitler." It certainly is true that the continuance of a law which prevents us from giving to the British all the aid "short of war," in which course both this Administration and its "loyal opposition" is committed and in which, as the polls show, more than ninety per cent of the American people concur—to continue such a law makes us seem singularly stupid and ineffectual.

The same thing can be said of the Johnson Act, repeal of which is the second objective. To again quote the Courier Journal, "This is a law which was passed on the lying assumption that we got into the last war to recover our debts and which is preserved in the outrageous hope that only love of cash could move us to strong action today." With these two laws out of the way, our aid to Great Britain can be increased immediately and greatly. With her cash exhausted, we could begin to give, and not sell, England the materials

Children Gather To Aid Elsie Downs Celebrate

A number of children gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Downs, Pine street, on Tuesday evening, to celebrate the 10th birthday of their daughter Elsie.

For games played, prizes were given to Jerry Kelly, and James Marshall. Elsie received many gifts. A birthday cake was the cented-piece.

Refreshments were served to: Carolyn Ludwig, Betty Marshall, Doris Giberson, Theresa Dugan, Mary Kelly, Madeline McAlpin, Mildred and Frances Hutchinson, Isabelle, Pauline and Vera Downs, Charles Brady, Leonard Dugan, Jerry Kelly, James Marshall, James Dugan, Charles Hutchinson, Arthur and Alan White, Herbert, "Mickie" and Joseph Downs, Robert, Eugene and Michael Downs.

Organization of an Industrial Advisory Council in connection with the vocational education program in the Bristol public schools was inaugurated last night. Temporary officers were named until such time as a larger number of industries are represented, when permanent officers will be named.

The meeting was held in the directors room of the Wood street school building and attended by Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of the Bristol schools; Doron Green, president of the School Board; Marty Green, Mill Street Business Men's Association; Ira S. Wilson, Fleetwings, Inc.; and John D. McGann, director of Vocational Training in the Bristol Schools. Others had been invited to the meeting but were unable to attend last evening. Representatives of other industries engaged in national defense work are to be invited to become members of the council.

TEMPORARY OFFICERS

Organization of an Industrial Advisory Council in connection with the vocational education program in the Bristol public schools was inaugurated last night. Temporary officers were named until such time as a larger number of industries are represented, when permanent officers will be named.

The meeting was held in the directors room of the Wood street school building and attended by Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of the Bristol schools; Doron Green, president of the School Board; Marty Green, Mill Street Business Men's Association; Ira S. Wilson, Fleetwings, Inc.; and John D. McGann, director of Vocational Training in the Bristol Schools. Others had been invited to the meeting but were unable to attend last evening. Representatives of other industries engaged in national defense work are to be invited to become members of the council.

The council is being organized because the vocational education program is rapidly developing here and certain policies will have to be adopted and the government requests the formation of such a group.

Mr. Snyder outlined the purposes of the council and advised that such a group is necessary in order to procure from the government certain equipment and tools. The council will survey the community and determine the type of training required to meet the needs of the community.

The details were discussed and a resolution adopted formally organizing the council. Warren P. Snyder was selected as temporary chairman and Mr. McGann as permanent secretary.

A motion was adopted approving a list of certain tools and equipment be furnished by the government.

A covered dish supper will be served. The refreshment committee had arranged a menu, and will solicit various items from the members.

Those present were: Vice president, Mrs. Angelo Napoli; Mrs. Wright Carlen, Mrs. Sarah Carman, Mrs. Elsie White, Mrs. Margaret Swanger, Miss Elsie Ettenger, George Zarz and Mrs. Johnson.

It was decided to have the party on the 16th of December instead of the 9th as first arranged.

Games have been planned in which everyone can join. Names of "Pollyannas" will be drawn, and gifts will be exchanged. A short business meeting will precede the social time.

AMERICAN IDEAS UNCHANGED

Pessimists who see the world tottering on the brink of ruin because of the success of the Axis powers must have felt cheered by news dispatches proclaiming the great British victory over the Italian navy, and by corroborative dispatches which show the Nazis and the Fac-ists to be having a bully streak of ill luck.

There seems to be no end to Greek successes against the Italians, the refusal of General Weygand to return from Africa to Vichy in conformity with German-inspired orders is reported, and experts claim that the Rumanian earthquake dealt a terrific blow to the Nazi war machine by lessening its supply of oil.

Still other dispatches tell of the bombing of military objectives in Danzig by Royal Air Force planes and of the successes scored by the British in knocking out of the sky Italian planes that had come to London to help the Nazis blast away at the Empire's capital.

Even the fact that Russian Foreign Commissar Molotov has returned to Moscow after lengthy conferences with German officials in Berlin can not be set down as a great blow to the Allies. Germany and Russia have been co-operating for more than a year in the seizure of other peoples' property, and the fact that they would hold conferences to consider additional filching of loose-lying wealth was to be expected.

Of course, the conferences may have far-reaching effects. London fears they may bring new political-economic-industrial agreements between the two nations, but Whitehall also knows that it is not a pact but the action which follows that really counts.

Turkey fears a projected drive through the Balkans to aid Italy.
Another view is that Hitler wished to unfold for Molotov his plans for a "new world order" with the hope of getting Russian co-operation or permission for a campaign through the Balkans to the Near East.

But the Germans will be disappointed at the effect of the parley on the United States. A Hitler newspaper suggests that in view of developments the United States should ask itself "whether it isn't a historical necessity to recognize the changing times and act accordingly." In these words the Nazi sheet is asking the United States to dismiss at one sweep its dislike of unjust aggression and its condemnation of the seizure of small democratic nations because of indications of Nazi diplomatic success with the Reds.

It is asking that the United States assume their immoral code of international behavior because the Axis powers claim to have another gangster nation more firmly attached to their side.

The United States took the right cue when it was reported that talks looking to a better understanding with Russia are likely to be broken off as a result of Molotov's visit to Berlin. They should not have been started.

A pretty good memory test would be to try to remember how long it has been since a lady has returned to this country from China bringing a baby giant panda.

As the average Army recruit is two inches taller and 15 pounds heavier than in '17, it is assumed the issue uniform comes in one size instead of two—viz., Too small.

Doylestown Church To Mark Anniversary

The dedication of the new educational building. Several services are planned for this occasion.
The Rev. Meyer M. Hostetter, pastor, has announced a "home-coming" service for Sunday morning, December 8th, at 11 o'clock, and at 2:30 on that day the new building, located on Mechanics street, will be dedicated.
The Rev. W. T. Hanzsche, D. D., Trenton, N. J., will be the speaker at the formal dedication service on Sunday afternoon.
Wednesday and Thursday evenings, December 11th and 12th, an elaborate religious drama, "The Rock," which is directed by Mrs. Richard R. Beck, will be presented in the educational building.
Friday evening, December 13th, there will be a congregational fellowship meeting which will be an informal get-together and the various ministers of the County Seat will be among the guests invited to attend.
Sunday, December 15th, the anniversary service will be held at 11 o'clock, and in the evening at 7:30 o'clock there will be a Christian education service with the Rev. Lee Gable, of the Pennsylvania Sabbath School Association, as the speaker.

risks which she needs to save herself and, incidentally, protect us.
Few dispute that this is the most effective and obvious defensive step we could possibly take. If we can contrive to end this war with England unconquered and the British fleet still in control of the seas, we can save ourselves many billions of dollars which we now plan to expend on a gigantic defense machine.

IF we can do that, we won't need so vast a machine. But with these laws out of the way we can do more than extend credit and give goods. We can provide ships—merchant ships to take to England the war materials without which she cannot win and warships to convey merchant ships and transports across the full extent of our declared "neutrality zone" or all the way to British ports. The mere suggestion of this will, of course, raise a howl from the isolationists and the appeasers. It will be charged that this will drag us into war that Germany will regard it as an act of war.

ACTUALLY, of course, it would not put us in the war any more than we are in now, nor would it give Hitler any more cause to think we were. If the violent and unrestrained denunciation which was poured out on him from both sides in the recent campaign, if the sending of the destroyers, the taking over of air bases in British possession in the Western Hemisphere, the planned sending of the flying fortresses and many other words and deeds—if these things have not convinced Hitler that we are actively on the side of England and opposing him, then nothing we could do would convince him. Of course, every nation in the world knows where we are and where we have been all the time.

DEEP in as this country is, it does not make sense to refrain now from taking the obvious steps to expand our aid by repealing these two laws. Failure to do so is inexplicable from the German and English points of view as well as our own—particularly as they could be repealed and still our position be described by that ambiguous phrase with which we futurally seek to camouflage what we are doing—"short of war." With the campaign over, it should now be possible to take a more realistic view of our position. That the repeal of both the Neutrality and the Johnson Acts will have strong Administration backing is felt certain by those engineering the movement. Mr. Roosevelt, it is said, not only would not oppose but would support. There is little doubt that support would come from Mr.
Willkie, who is clearheaded as well as courageous on this business of helping Britain. Of course there will be opposition. There is in both parties an element which will violently resist.

BUT it is numerically small in Congress, and has no effective popular support in the country.
Its leaders are highly articulate, but also highly impotent. Unless something happens to alter Mr.
Roosevelt's frame of mind, there seems no real obstacle to the speedy repeal of these two hampering acts in January. This would mean that aid, vastly more important than any we have yet given, will get to England before spring. That's the idea. That will be the effort. It is an effort, too, which not only will not impede or slow down our own defense program but should accelerate it.

THE truth is that to adhere to the so-called Neutrality Act, which we do not now observe, and to cling to another law which hampers our own efforts, is absurd. These things do not fool anybody—they simply make us interfere with ourselves. We can keep out of the war in the sense that we need not declare war and we need send no men abroad. But when there is almost unanimous agreement that our own national interests are deeply involved with the survival of England, there seems no excuse not to give full aid in every way "short of war." That we cannot do so long as these two laws remain on the books.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

There were over four thousand spectators at Octavia Osborne's funeral. Milling for a view of the casket and the plot which was to be the murdered woman's final resting-place, they trampled over graves, and down the flowers that were on them, and upon several headstones.
They were incensed by the non-appearance of Miss Osborne's near relatives. By absenting himself from his sister's funeral, they agreed, Stephen Osborne had betrayed a sad lack of proper feelings. . . .

Although Inspector Burrows made an excellent breakfast in record time the following Wednesday morning, his attention did not stray for an instant from the newspaper which was propped against the sugar bowl near his right elbow. The column in which his eyes were riveted was headed:

POLICE SEEK MISSING WITNESS Where Is Edward Fleming?

There was a photograph of the missing young man in the centre of the page. Mr. Burrows leaned over her husband's shoulder and inspected it approvingly.

"Looks like a movie star."
"You'll find plenty such faces in the rogue's gallery," observed the inspector with his heaviest sarcasm.

"He won't be missing long with his picture in all the papers. Someone's sure to spot him," offered Mrs.
Burrows.

"But you've seen in a hundred different places, hundreds of miles apart, before the day's out. Our job would be a sight easier if folks had less imagination."

"Why d'you suppose he's disappeared?"

"Use your head, girl," mumbled her husband, through a mouthful of wheat-cake and sausage. "Why do people mixed up in such a case usually disappear?"

"Oh, but that nice young fellow couldn't have done it. More likely he knows something—something that concerns someone he loves—and he's run away rather than be forced to tell it."

"Now, that's not a half-bad idea—coming from you," said the Inspector grudgingly.

"Oh, I don't use my head for a hatrack, like some people I could mention," purred his spouse good-naturedly.

When the Inspector arrived at police headquarters he found Sergeant Feathers perusing over a sheet of violet-tinted notepaper.

"Any word of young Fleming?" Burrows asked.

"Not yet."

"The Inspector stood by the window deep in apparent thought.
"Shouldn't," he surprised, you know," he said, with a sapient air, "if he ran away because he knows something he doesn't want to tell; something that might incriminate one of the family—maybe that girl he's supposed to be in love with."

"I can't see that girl as a killer; otherwise the idea seems sound."

hatrack like some people I could mention," said Inspector Burrows casually. "Anything new this morning?"

"Only an anonymous letter from Miss Whipple."

"The Inspector stared.

"What do you mean, an anonymous letter from Miss Whipple? If it's anonymous how do you know who it's from?"

"First time I saw the lady I sized her up as the anonymous letter writing type, so I took the precaution of obtaining a sample of her pen work. It's identical with the handwriting of the note that came this morning."

"If you get much sharper, my lad, you'll be cutting yourself. Let's see the letter."

Inspector Burrows frowned as he read it:

To the police:—

Simon Osborne, Stephen Osborne's cousin, is supposed to have left Lakelawn before noon on the day Miss Osborne arrived. But he did not leave by train or bus. Did he leave at all? He is a questionable character and was on bad terms with the dead woman. He is known to have sponged on his cousin for years. Did he kill Miss Osborne, hoping that his cousin would inherit her money and that he would be able to sponge on him all the more?

One Who Knows

Scratching his head over the letter, Inspector Burrows went to consult Sheriff Black. In a short while he returned.

"The Sheriff says when you've finished those odd jobs I gave you, you'd better go over to Lakelawn and check up on this. Find out whether Simon Osborne left the village by train or bus on the day of the crime. If he didn't, go on to New York and look him up. And watch your step, my lad. From all accounts this Simon Osborne is a crafty old bird. Don't let him put anything over on you."

It was almost noon before Sergeant Feathers was able to leave for Lakelawn. At the village station he interviewed the baggage man.

"Know Simon Osborne? I should say I do. Wish I had a buck for every drink I've had with him in Ryan's Bar."

"Do you remember him taking a train from here on the tenth?"
"No, I don't—and why? 'Cause he didn't, that's why. You're not the first that's asked me that. A certain nosey ol' dame was asking me the same question only the other day.
Don't tell me you cops are after ol' Si?"

Sergeant Feathers ignored the question.

"You're absolutely sure he didn't leave here by train?"
"Sure, I'm sure. Ain't I said so?"

"Well, don't forget it, because you may be called upon to swear to it in court."

The Sergeant walked to the bus stop at the corner. There was no bus in sight and the drug-store clerk told him that none was due for half an hour. While Feathers waited, he saw Miss Whipple coming out of a house. The detective hurried after her and raised his hat.
"Good morning, Miss Whipple.
We got your letter all right."

The spinster looked daggers at him, but did not deny having written the anonymous note.

"What makes you so sure that Simon Osborne did not leave the village by bus?"
"I asked all the conductors, that's what," she snapped.

"Then you've saved me a lot of trouble. Thanks very much. Good morning."

Walking toward her house, Miss Whipple ran into Ann Osborne who was coming the other way. The spinster stopped and smiled gra-tiously.

"I've just met Sergeant Feathers, my dear, and what do you think?
He asked me some questions about your Uncle Simon. Now I wonder why the police are interested in him?"

Ann scornfully eyed her, and walked on. But she was startled by the spinster's news. The police and Uncle Simon! Surely. . . .

Words flew chillingly through her brain; words Uncle Simon had uttered on the morning of the murder:
"If I were your father I'd find some way to get rid of Octavia. I've a good mind to do it anyway. It would solve

GRAND THEATRE

"Cross Country Romance," dealing in sprightly fashion with the hectic coast-to-coast adventures of a penniless doctor who can't rid himself of a beautiful trailer-stowaway, brings Gene Raymond and Wendy Barrie as co-stars, to the Grand today. Raymond plays a young, newly-graduated doctor who is offered an important medical research job in China. To get there he plans to drive from New York to San Francisco in his auto trailer and there catch a freighter to his destination.

In the role of an impetuous heiress, Wendy Barrie decides she can't go through with a distasteful marriage. She sheds her wedding gown, makes a miraculous escape from the house clad only in her undies, and seeks refuge in a trailer parked nearby.
